Executive summary

Three public roles reorder results while sharing financial rules and English Urdu scenarios. These personas are research-informed hypotheses, not interviews.

Key findings

R1 Prospective borrower

A prospective borrower is a Pakistani first-time homebuyer assessing a household commitment. They can choose borrower guidance, adjust property, principal, tenure, equity and KIBOR, then inspect repayments. They must never receive guaranteed eligibility, approval or future rates.

Persona hypothesis: a salaried or self-employed household with limited savings needs clear monthly payments and upfront equity. This is research-informed, not an interview.

R2 Family adviser

A family adviser is a household member helping compare housing commitments. They can choose family guidance, change public inputs and inspect yearly balances. They must never access another person's saved financial data; the app stores none.

Persona hypothesis: a relative needs clear totals for a shared budget discussion. This role is inferred rather than interviewed.

R3 Housing finance adviser

A housing finance adviser is a bank professional explaining an indicative scenario. They can choose adviser guidance and explain shared calculator outputs. They must never present an estimate as a sanctioned bank offer or edit scheme rules.

Persona basis: SBP requires participating institutions to communicate scheme features through branches and other channels.
